

Roger Peckinpaugh Becomes Manager of Washington Senators in Big Three-Cornered Deal

Joe Dugan Goes With O'Rourke To the Red Sox

Athletics Get "Bing" Miller and Jose Acosta as Part of Latest Baseball Trade

By R. J. Kelly

Roger Peckinpaugh, former captain and veteran shortstop of the champion Yankees, who was traded to the Red Sox several weeks ago, will manage the Washington Senators next season. Announcement of the completion of the long-pending three-cornered deal among the Washington, Boston and Philadelphia American League clubs was made last night by Harry Frazee, president of the Red Sox, following a long-distance telephone conversation with Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators.

Under the terms of the transaction consummated last night the temperamental Joe Dugan, star infielder of the Red Sox, will join the staff of the Red Sox. Griffith first obtained the former Holy Cross player from Connie Mack, manager and part owner of the Philadelphia club, for the Red Sox. It was said that no cash was involved in this swap, but it is hardly likely that Mack disposed of Dugan for the two players without the addition of a monetary consideration.

After obtaining the right to Dugan's services from the Athletics, Griffith turned the star infielder and shortstop Frank O'Rourke over to the Red Sox in exchange for Peckinpaugh. Immediately after the completion of the deal the president of the Senators announced that he would install the former Yankee veteran as the manager of the Washington team.

Makes Senators Formidable

According to present indications, the acquisition of Peckinpaugh will make the Washington team a very formidable contender for the American League championship of 1922. By swinging the deal Griffith has firmly strengthened the one weak spot in his infield without depriving the other departments of the team of any of their former power. Unless something unusual occurs, the Senators will start the next pennant campaign with one of the strongest lineups in the American League.

Howard Shanks will be stationed at third base, Ted Stiles at short, Harris at second and the brilliant Joe Judge at first base. All of these, with the exception of Harris, might be classed as powerful batters and each is a fielder of high caliber. In addition, Harris is one of the fastest base runners in the league.

Peckinpaugh will have Sam Rice, Clyde Milan and Frank Brower for his outfield, Ed Gaherty and Val Pich for his catchers and Harry Courtney, Walter Johnson, George Mogridge, George Erickson and Jerebel Zachary for his first string pitching staff.

Peck Has "Baseball Brain"

Peckinpaugh has long since proven his ability as the leader of a team both as captain and as a player. On several occasions acting manager of the Yankees. In addition to being a great mechanical player, Peck has a wonderful "baseball brain" and the prospects for early success in his new position are very bright.

The acquisition of Dugan and O'Rourke by the Red Sox should also add much needed infield strength to that club. According to the present plans of Manager Hughie Duffy, Dugan will start the season at short and will be moved over to third base to replace Foster in the event that the latter falls below the form that he displayed last year. In such a case O'Rourke will probably be given a chance at the Red Sox. The right side of the infield will be completed by the addition of Derrill Pratt at second base and recently acquired George Burns at first base.

Deal Delights Peck
CLEVELAND, Jan. 10.—"If I am able to plug that gap at shortstop Washington ought to do pretty well in the American League race next season," declared Roger Peckinpaugh to-night when informed that the deal which makes him playing-manager of the National League club had been completed. "It's great news. I certainly am happy," Peckinpaugh continued. "I am pleased that Washington did not give up on me. I am glad to get to go from Boston, as I regard him one of the best in the game."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Clark G. Griffith, president of the Washington club, declared to-night that the coming of Roger Peckinpaugh to his club would make it a first-line contender in the pennant race. He expressed the utmost enthusiasm over the three-cornered deal concluded here to-day. Formal announcement of the result of the negotiations was made to-night simultaneously with a similar announcement in New York. In discussing the deal Griffith emphasized that no money was involved in the exchange.

A Tale of Two Fighters

Jeffries and Dempsey
There were two men within the ring who had too much of everything.
Too much to find another blend
Worth while to take the loser's end.
Too much for either too expect
To often step out and collect.
It's pretty tough to be too good
To get on as you order should.
—("Ehapsodies of the Resin.")

Jim Jeffries was a matter of twenty-four years old when he knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons and became heavyweight champion of the world. Jack Dempsey was precisely the same age when he knocked out Jess Willard and took over the crown.

With that starting point no two champions in ring history have followed paths that were so nearly parallel.

Jeff at His Best

We recall running across Jeffries in the fall or winter of 1904. Only a short while before the California bear had cleaned up Jack Munro in two rounds and there was nothing left to fight.

Five years after he had stopped Fitz for the first time the field was swept free of talent. "I'm through," he said, "just when I'm at my best. But there's no one left to fight."

At the end of three years Jeffries was about where Dempsey is to-day, nearly three years beyond his championship start.

Which is to say, that while there were two or three bare possibilities, there was no challenger of merit left with even an outside chance to win. Jeffries, between 1900 and 1904, loomed as high above the field as Dempsey does to-day.

He wasn't as quick a finisher, but just about as sure to win at that period of his career.

Between the ages of twenty-six and thirty Jeffries loomed above the field like Gibraltar above an anthill.

To discuss a challenger around 1903 or 1904 was only good for a yawn. In fact, we can recall no one who was around challenging the champion then except Jack Munro.

Dempsey a Parallel Case

Dempsey will be twenty-seven years old in June. He is now almost exactly where Jeffries was at twenty-seven.

At thirty Jeffries was practically forced into retirement because there was no one to fight.

Dempsey is almost in the same fix now. There are still one or two prospects left, but they are none too robust when it comes to a chance with the champion.

Dempsey at twenty-seven is a better boxer than Jeffries was at that stage and a faster worker. But he isn't as heavy or as strong. Jeffries was an inch taller than Dempsey and at least twenty pounds heavier.

The Californian was also extremely fast. They stand much alike in their ability to take punishment, for both could absorb unlimited quantities without being annoyed.

Another Coincidence

There is still another striking coincidence in the careers of the two great champions.

When Jeffries retired there was a dark shadow moving steadily forward. This shadow was Jack Johnson.

For Sport Instructors

BOLIVIA wants the American K. of C. to introduce and promote American amateur sports in Bolivia. S. Abbott Maginnis, American Minister to Bolivia, just returned to New York, brought the message to K. of C. headquarters yesterday, stating that the leading citizens of Bolivia had asked him to urge the K. of C. to take up the task of sport promotion in Bolivia as they had taken up welfare work during the war.

The plea will be laid before the K.-C. international board of directors at its meeting here next Sunday and Monday.

Coach Joe Wright announced.

The candidates included all eight members of last year's varsity crew. In addition four members of last year's junior varsity are trying for places, as well as seven members of the 1921 freshmen crew. Coach Wright expects to have the shells on the water during the latter part of February.

Purves Reaches Third Round In Ad Men's Golf Tournament

Champion Wins by Default and Scores Easily Over Harrison in Second Round Match; Manson, Conklin, Gardner Only Other Dangerous Contenders

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 10.—A full day of golf served to divide members of the winter golf league of advertising interests into divisions of eights, with the championship eight playing from scratch and all others from handicaps. Two match play rounds were played to-day, and there was nothing to indicate that any one would be able to prevent R. Murray Purves, of Woodland, from retaining his championship title.

Purves won by default in the first round and defeated H. F. Harrison, of Orcola, 6 and 5, in the second round. Ernest Manson, Framingham, Mass.; W. E. Conklin, Dunwoody, and Dr. A. R. Gardner, of Siwanoy, all won two matches, and are the only players in the first eight who appear capable of giving Purves a hard game.

H. W. Leeds, of Atlantic City, took a total of 115 in the preliminary tournament Saturday, but he retrieved himself to-day when he won two matches in Class B and remained in the top eight of that section.

There was a rumor that H. E. Harrison had holed a full brassie shot, but it was found that it was only a full putt of six inches he holed. Roy Dorsetine, of Scarsdale, and M. C. Meigs, of Chicago, went to the nineteenth hole to decide their first division match, but Meigs won the hole with an eight.

New I. C. A. A. A. Expansion May Give West 1922 Games

Expansion of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America into a nation-wide organization and staging of the annual championship games in sections of the country other than the East appear to be likely developments at the annual meeting here on March 4.

One of the most important amendments would provide that a college holding membership in the I. A. A. A. would not be dropped in case it were not represented in championship games at least once in two consecutive years.

Competition would hinge entirely upon membership and conformity to the I. A. A. A. regulations and eligibility code without compulsory restrictions relative to continuity of such competition.

The adoption of such an amendment may result in the 1922 championship games being held in the Middle West. It is reported that the first step in this direction will be made in the presentation of an invitation from the University of Michigan to stage the titular meet at Ann Arbor next May, or certainly not later than 1923.

The University of Michigan has an up-to-date stadium and field, which compares favorably with the best in the East. The Wolverines have competed many times in the Eastern I. A. A. A.

Cornell Bests Syracuse At Basketball, 24-18

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Cornell defeated Syracuse in a hard-played basketball game to-night, winning by the score of 24 to 18. Syracuse tied at the opening of the second half, but Cornell drove on and a fine basket by Capron in the last two minutes settled the issue.

Pos. Cornell (24) Syracuse (18)
1. Porter, 2. Porter, 3. Porter, 4. Porter, 5. Porter, 6. Porter, 7. Porter, 8. Porter, 9. Porter, 10. Porter, 11. Porter, 12. Porter, 13. Porter, 14. Porter, 15. Porter, 16. Porter, 17. Porter, 18. Porter, 19. Porter, 20. Porter, 21. Porter, 22. Porter, 23. Porter, 24. Porter.

Dr. Howe to Supervise All Harvard Rowing

BOSTON, Jan. 10.—A reorganization of rowing at Harvard, under which Dr. R. Heber Howe, a graduate and last year's freshman coach, will become general supervisor and director, was announced by the graduate rowing committee to-day. Under the plan Dr. Howe will have charge of the coaching of the varsity and all other crews and will assign assistant coaches as he decides best.

It was said unofficially that there was every expectation that Bill Hanes, professional coach of Harvard crew for several years, would continue in connection with the varsity eight.
